

COUSINS OF NELLIE CARTER FIGHT ON HER WILL

DEMAND SHARE IN $4,000,000 ESTATE

Cut Off With $5000, They Say Spinster Unduly Influenced

Ten cousins of Nellie Carter, accretive spinster, who died at her $2000-a-month suite at the Ritz Carlton last January, and who were given $2000 apiece out of a $4,000,000 estate, began their fight to break the will today in Suffolk County.

Defying an injunction in the will which orders out of the list of beneficiaries any who contest the will, the ten cousins, only half-blood, sought to frame jury issues claiming that Miss Carter was of unsound mind and was unduly influenced.

Those who are contesting the will, are all sons and daughters of brothers and a sister of Nellie's father, the late Charles Carter. They include Mary Dilly Whelan, Julia B. Carter and Everett Merriam Carter, of Lismar, Emily L. Barnes and Adele M. Merriam Coverly, of Cambridge; William G. Carter, of New York; George Grant Carter, William Warren Davis and Samuel Andrew Davis, of Haverhill; and Abel Carter Phillips, of Beverly.

WILLMAN DEFENSE WILL. They are represented by Robert T. Bushnell and Joseph G. Ryer, Arthur M. Willman and John F. Willman. The latter received $500,000 in the will, is counsel for the estate.

Bushnell charged that the respondents in the case were involved in a plot to gain possession of Miss Carter's property.

"Nellie Carter was utterly alone in the world," Bushnell said, "and particularly susceptible to influence."

Bushnell charged that Attorney Willman and one Louis James Brown, attached to the First Corps Area staff at the Army Base as publicists, were the principal beneficiaries of the will.

He charged that Miss Carter was forced to testify to the contrary, and that she was under the influence of Willman and Brown, and that they were employing agents from the grave.

Bushnell reviewed the Carter family history from the death of her father about 20 years ago, and the successive deaths of her mother and sister, Lizzie, to show that since 1912 Nellie was at the mercy of Willman, who acted as financial adviser.

FEARED FIRE DEATH Regarding the condition of Nellie's mind, Bushnell said she lived in constant dread of being burned to death, and that she would often sleep in a chair, half-dressed, rather than go to bed.

He claimed that this fear of fire grew so great that when she moved from the Hotel Touraine to the Ritz-Carlton in 1931 she would not have a bed in her room and slept always in a chair.

Miss Carter's will was the cause of much comment when it was filed shortly after her death. The will revealed that eight members of the family of Joseph D. Leland, wealthy Boston architect and social registerite, received $100,000 each.

William, her lawyer, received half a million, Mrs. Barbara Tria, a maid and Pauline Roy, her chauffeur, got $100,000 each. $100,000 FOR LAWYER'S SON Willman's son, Sargent H. Willman, got $100,000. Miss Mary MacFarlane, Miss Carter's secretary, got $100,000. Louis Brown, who Bushnell claims, posed as Miss Carter's nephew, and Mrs. Amelia Fitchell, her companion, each received $100,000.

Eleven bequests ranging from $10,000 to $100,000, but representing only seven per cent of her total wealth, according to Bushnell, were given to various charitable, hospital, charitable and educational institutions.

Bushnell claimed that the will drawn by Miss Carter in 1932 provided that 50 per cent of her estate should go to charity and that Willman should receive only $100,000.

DEPUTY SHERIFF HOWLAND CYRIL BUCK KENNETH BUCK DEPUTY SHERIFF BASSETT

The battle over the exclusion of the two alleged confessions made by Kenneth Buck in the kidnapping of little 10-year-old Margaret "Peggy" McMath, raised by the defense in the Buck trial in Barnstable County Court yesterday, was resumed today, with the jury excluded while the point was argued, and the court finally barred all of one and most of the other. KIDNAP VICTIMS ONLY AT BEACH

Frances McMillen, 9, and her brother, Nelson, A. of Lynn, playing on the beach at Lynn Beach this morning.

Returned to their home at 37 Everett st., by police, they told their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James McMillen, that they had spent the night in an abandoned hen coop near home, fearing to go into the house because they had gone to the beach instead of to school yesterday and expected punishment.

A searching party of neighbors poked near their hiding place last night. They didn't sleep very well and today decided to return to the beach. They had had nothing to eat except the lunches they stored off with yesterday and at home they consumed large breakfasts. Something else, not on the menu, was scheduled to be served later.

There will be no further "arrest period" in which applications for licenses may be filed. Beginning tomorrow, beer must bear a label stating in minimum as well as its maximum alcoholic content, to protect consumers against near beer.

His Life Is Just One Break After Another—None of 'Em Good!

Brinkley, Ark., June 14 (AP)—Jake Campbell, 42, is in the hospital again—this time with both legs broken.

Campbell had had more than his share of tough luck. He fell off a horse and broke an arm when he was 12. When the war broke out, he went to France where a piece of shrapnel hit his leg and sent him to a hospital for six months.

Two years ago he was working in a power plant here and dropped a lighted cigarette. In reaching for it, he came in contact with a high voltage wire. His body was badly burned and both arms were broken. He was in a hospital sixteen months that time. One of his arms was amputated at the shoulder, and all the fingers were taken from the other hand.

Dismissed from the hospital a few months ago, he bought a small farm near here. He was seated on the front porch of his home the other day when a speeding automobile left the highway in front of the house, tore through a fence and struck him.

Solomon Jurors See Fisticuff According to the testimony offered before Judge Good in municipal court today, the Solomon jurors from their rooms in the Hotel Bellevue witnessed a one-sided battle between Edward Murray of Anderson st., West End, and Frank Waldron of Sheridan st., Portland, Me.

Special Officer Timothy Wallace, whose duty it is to watch the front side of the Beacon st. hotel, told the court today that Murray attempted to borrow money from Waldron and that the latter told him he was unable to accommodate him.

Murray then followed Waldron and when he failed to punch him the officer jumped from his car, he said. Before he was able to place Murray under arrest, the street was in a turmoil and the jurors were left to their own devices to fight from their hotel windows.

The court found Murray guilty and continued the case of disposal until Friday.

EXPERT IN CLASH OVER SOLLOMON DEATH GUN FATAL SHOTS FIRED FROM ONE WEAPON, EXPERTS INSIST

Judge Beaudreau stepped into the breach and halted the words before they were uttered.

TALKED TO POLICE.

James Lewis of the "Blue Diamonds" quartet of entertainers, filling an engagement at the Cotton Club at the time of the killing, resumed the stand for cross-examination as the day's first witness, and admitted that he had discussed the case with police and the district attorney.

Under cross-examination by Atty. John P. White, counsel for Burke, he said that on the morning of the killing he knew only two of the six men accused of the slaying. These two, he said, were "Sacks and Frank, or Coyne and Karlsson."

Lewis said the first time he ever heard the names of the other four was during a discussion of the case with the police, during which they showed him photographs. He admitted that police had shown him the name of Moore at that time.

Lewis declared he remained at Roxbury Crossing station from early on the murder morning until 7 o'clock that night, although he had given his story to police an hour or so after the shooting. He could not recall who was the first witness released by police, but he said he was released alone.

SAW SOLOMON AND 4.

Lewis admitted he talked with Sgt. William McCarthy at the Hotel Statler about the case as well as at the police station. Yesterday Al Brantley, master of ceremonies at the Cotton Club, denied on the stand that he had discussed the case with police more than once.

Under cross-examination by Atty. John J. Donovan, Jr., representing O'Donnell, the witness was asked his location in the Cotton Club when he first saw Solomon and "the four boys" in the grill room. He replied that he was passing through the archway from the large dining room. Solomon and the four talking.

Asked if he saw any other people in the grill room when he recognized Lewis, he said that he saw "people who worked in the place."

Asked again who they had seen and recognized, he said, "Frank and Sacks." He knew some of the guests by sight, he said, but could not remember whom they were.

'Killer' Only Man He Saw Running

Although there was much confusion in the Cotton Club when the first shot was fired, Solomon to his death was fired, James Lewis, an entertainer, couldn't recall today that he saw anybody running to the door. Pressed by defense counsel, Lewis said that he saw only one person run in the white club. That was Coyne, the alleged killer.

DIDN'T KNOW HIM AS 'KING'

Neither could he recall how many guests there were in the grill room.

HE HEARD SHOTS.

Lewis said also that he saw the checkroom guy, but when Atty. Donovan tried to pin him down as to whether it was at that particular time, he would say only that it was "about the same time."

Lieut. Seibold testified that he was in charge of firearms and ballistic experiments at headquarters. He was shown the bullet, but instead of identifying it on the stand he stepped down and held it under the strong light of the court stenographer's lamp.

Then Lieut. Seibold announced it was the bullet given him for examination by Sgt. McCarthy.

He was then shown the bullet placed as an exhibit yesterday by Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner, as one taken from Solomon's back after it had passed through his abdomen, causing fatal injuries.

The entertainer said he was starting back to the small dining room when he heard three or four shots fired. There was confusion all immediately in the club, he said, but he could not recall that he saw people running to the door. Pressed by Atty. Donovan, he said he saw one person running, and that was Coyne.

Patrolman William H. Miller of Roxbury Crossing station testified that at 5 a. m. on the murder morning he was in the grill room of the Cotton Club for bullets and found one in the wall of the washroom about five feet from the floor. This he extracted and turned over to Sgt. McCarthy.

JURY SEES DEATH BULLET.

Sgt. McCarthy, called to the stand, identified a bullet as the one given him by Miller, and said he had given it to Lieut. Edward J. Seibold at headquarters. The bullet was produced by Asst. Dist. Atty.

The bullet was shown to Judge Beaudreau and then Doyle held it in the palm of his hand and exhibited it to the jurors, who

Witnesses Under Heavy Guard

As on the first day, the Solomon witnesses today were heavily guarded. Each one was escorted in an out of court by police officers.

When they were brought into court, they were handed over to a court officer, who escorted each witness up to the stand, holding a hand tightly on the witness' shoulder. After the witness testified, he was escorted back to the door in similar fashion and handed over to the waiting police.

Capt. Stephen J. Flaherty of Roxbury Crossing Station, and Sgt. William J. McCarthy and Benjamin Poole, of the same division, held guard while the three defendants in the case.

but the marking is less heavy on it.

Capt. Van Amburgh was taken in a cross-examination by Atty. White.

Q—You said you were positive the two bullets were fired from the same gun? A—Yes.

DENIES SACCO ERROR

Q—Have you reduced the study of bullets to the extent that you can say you are positive? A—I have frequently done so.

Q—In other cases where you have made mistakes... A—Name one case where I've made a mistake?

Q—In the Sacco-Vanzetti case didn't you put the barrels of the Q—Waan's gun assembled with one barrel from another gun? A—No.

Q—Waan's it in your custody? A—No.

Q—You gave an opinion on that? A—What are you referring to—the trial?

Prosecutor Doyle had been objecting, and here Judge Beaudreau stepped in with the curt warning that he did not want to go into the

Witnesses Under Heavy Guard

Sacco-Vanzetti case or any other case.

He's positive, that's all," said Atty. White.

"In this particular case," replied Doyle.

MADE BULLET TESTS

Capt. Van Amburgh said he had examined the bullets in the case and had made comparisons by the microscope and with the eye. He had made no measurements. Asked if this examination was not limited in matter made by lines and grooves in revolving in the rifling he replied:

"Not necessarily. There's a detail in the material of gun barrels which is a matter of accident. The detail is impressed on the bullet."

Q—Inside the barrel there are only lines and grooves? A—In general.

Q—In particular? A—No.

The witness said there is a peculiarity of a pistol which may be peculiar on the lines nor on the grooves.

Q—Isn't it possible for two pistols to be identical? A—in dimensions.

Q—Why do you limit it to that?

ANSWERS AFTER LIT.

Doyle objected, and there was another wrangle, after which Van Amburgh replied:

"They could be identical as far as the dimensions are concerned, but identification, so far as the expert goes, goes beyond that point. It isn't a matter of defining and is not intended by the maker. It may have occurred since the manufacture of the gun. There may be burrs on the muzzle or the breach end of the barrel."

"This would result from experience or an accident of the barrel through careless handling. After a period of time, even though the dimensions remain the same, a character has developed in individual barrels. There is an accumulation at time goes on in the gun barrel which makes for individuality."

ONLY ONE GUN USED

Q—By Doyle: What experience have you had with firearms and ballistic experiments? A—I in the army, from 1916 to 1919, I had charge of army ordnance, light and heavy firearms, revolvers, rifles. I have been connected with the Boston police department in that work since 1920.

Q—Have you conducted many experiments? A—Yes, I have conducted hundreds of experiments.

Q—Will you kindly examine Exhibits 4 and 6 and give us your opinion as to the caliber. Give us No. 4 first. (This is the fatal bullet.) A—It is .38-caliber.

Q—Now, what is your opinion as to Exhibit No. 6? A—It is .38-caliber.

Q—From your opinion, based on Exhibits 4 and 6, have you formed an opinion as to whether they were fired from the same gun? A—I have.

Q—What is your opinion? A—My opinion is that they were fired from the same revolver.

Lt. Seibold pointed out a gash on the side of Exhibit No. 4—the fatal Solomon bullet—and said there was no similar mark on No. 6, which was found in the washroom wall.

RULET STRUCK OBJECT

Under cross-examination by Atty. Monahan, the witness was asked if a bullet, in leaving a gun, revolves or if it spins without revolving. He replied that it both revolves and spins.

Asked if there was any way to determine whether the gash was on the left or right side of the bullet, Lt. Seibold said there was. He said the mark indicated that the bullet had struck some hard object.

Under cross-examination by White, he said he had determined by a study of the lines and grooves that the bullets were fired from the same gun. Asked if it is possible that two or more guns might have the same lines and grooves, he said, "As a matter of fact, yes."

Q—Isn't it possible they might be exactly alike? A—I have been to the Colt factory and have seen two barrels rifled at the same time, and they were not the same.

Q—Do you know, from your experience, if the bullet, gashed, marked as Exhibit 6, would make a jagged wound? A—I would say so.

Q—Does it strike as so peculiar that the gash runs sideways on the bullet? A—Yes.

VAN AMBURGH ON STAND

Capt. Charles J. Van Amburgh, ballistic expert for the State Police, was the next witness, and at Prosecutor Doyle's request, he sketched his experience in that work over the years.

He testified that the two bullets had been taken to his office on March 22 by Lt. Seibold and that both were of .38 caliber.

Q—That's what I mean. A—There's no mark.

Q—Where? A—The same relation to the position on Exhibit 4.

Polly Binney Visiting in West

MISS POLLY BINNEY, daughter of the Henry P. Binneys of Brush Hill rd., Milton, is visiting here with her mother, Dr. and Mrs. Roy E. Sturtevant, at Lake Forest, Illinois, taking in the festivities of that branch of the garden clubs of America and also the World Fair.

Nancy being one of a talented family capitalized her artistic energies by writing feature articles for Vogue, at which she made a tremendous success, and is still doing it. Her good-looking husband was not so fortunate and is still trying to find the right job... depression times have been tough on Cupid.

Harvard-Yale Race on Friday

THE HARVARD-YALE BOAT RACES will take place on Friday of this week this term... the first time they have occurred before the class day festivities in history. We understand that boys who are on the varsity crews want to take part with their classes in the commencement exercises and that is the reason.

Neal Rantoul is having a merry party aboard his yacht for his daughter Lucy, who was one of the most charming deb's of this year, and they will get sail for the races on Thursday.

The boys who have been lucky enough to look over the new crop of deb's for the coming season remark, "They look as though they had just come out of the egg"... Now what do they mean by that—all wet and wobbly? Mrs. James Duane looked very summery and sweet in a soft, new green chiffon at the Waldo Brown garden fete... she won the prize in the raffie, which was a large bottle of exquisite perfume.

Chatty Notes of Social Circles

MR. AND MRS. HANDSAY CARP, together with their daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Cabot Holt, and the latter's two children, will be arriving in New York today from Florence, Italy, where they have been staying throughout the winter months. They plan to go directly to their summer home in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.

Others in New York just now include Mrs. Robinson Locke of Boston, Brookline, and Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Clark, Jr., of Cambridge, who are registered at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Latest Notes of Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

THE noble horse reigns supreme this week and the ladies of fashion will turn out in rig costumes to watch his triumphs. Mrs. William O. Clark was seen wearing a good looking white velvet skirt with a bright gray colored blouse and sport hat showing her light brown coiffure.

Mrs. Henry S. Hall looks well in riding clothes. Her outfit consists of tan trousers, good looking brown boots and a smart riding coat with slouch sport hat.

Mrs. Quincy Shaw 2d, of South Scituate, is looking especially lovely in a white organdie frock with ruffle effect and trailing graceful lines that becomes her statuesque figure.

Mrs. Richard Russell, another ardent horsewoman, is wearing a trim sport ensemble of tan tweed with dark brown hat and brown accessories.

Mrs. Bayard Warren, always smartly garbed, is wearing a charming dark blue and white slip afternoon frock with picture belt, and exceedingly becoming to her.

A lovely young thing is Miss Helen Macomber with hair of tawny gold brushed back from her forehead in a high wave. She wears a bright yellow sport sweater tied at the neck and short sleeves.

Miss Catherine Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Weld Richardson of Brookline, who is to make her debut next year, has already created a stir in debutante circles. Her blue and white spring skirt beautifully fitted and most becoming to her is one of her striking outfits. With it she carries a white pocketbook and white accessories.

Among those who modeled so attractively at the garden fete in Milton at the home of Mrs. Wido H. Brown.

Phebe Russell Is Brookline Bride

A prominent society wedding takes place today when Miss Phebe Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin E. W. Russell of Goldard ave., becomes the bride of the Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, rector of Trinity Church, Boston.

There are also six bridesmaids. Miss Jane Everett of Chatham, Miss Polly Cunningham of West Newton, Miss Anne Knapp of Rye, N. Y., who is a cousin of the bride, Mrs. Robert S. Oden, the former Edith Milton of Charles st., and Mrs. Philip Wren, Jr., who was Virginia Taylor, a sister of the bridegroom.

Mr. Robert Fulton Blake 2d of Cambridge serves as best man, and the ushers are Mr. Philip Wren, Jr., Mr. Whittier Willner, Mr. John R. Garrison, Mr. Theodore B. Taylor, Jr., a brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Edmund Sears Kelley, Jr., Mr. H. H. Wood, Mr. H. Farnham and Mr. Wellington Wells, Jr., both of Cambridge. The couple will reside at Duxbury where they have rented a house on Adams st.

and a Southern group who interpret the history of the territory to us. Howells was typically American in all his tastes and was never known London better than O. Henry came to know New York.

In her most recent novel, "American Beauty," Edna Ferber reveals the very beauties of the Connecticut countryside, of which the Olden speaks, and in "So Big" she wrote a saga of the only "British" campaign. And it is just this feeling that America stands in such sore need of today. Why should we hesitate to give it?

FEET

Everywhere weary women, worn by the endless routine of house work or office work, look forward to vacation. They see themselves energetic again, untiring, enjoying social activities, feeling and looking their true age—instead of years older.

But many of these women, unless they get down to fundamentals, unless they remove the cause, are going to feel as just as fagged on vacation as before it. For feet, not work, are usually the cause of the overpowering fatigue, the aching arches and muscles that punish so many women.

Nature did not make part-time feet. Feet are designed and constructed to do a full day's work, the same as eyes or hands. And they will do it, if given shoes that co-operate with the feet, instead of battling against them.

Arch Preserver Shoes have a rigid steel arch that never sags, a special metatarsal feature that aids the forward arch, a perfectly flat tread to prevent crowding of toes and painful squeezing of nerves and veins.

Arch Preserver Shoes have a record—a record of actually preventing and correcting most common foot troubles.

And at my stores the Arch Preserver is fitted by the heel-to-ball system of fitting that insures that every part of the shoe fits every part of the foot. Arch Preserver Shoes come in a variety of the smartest, up-to-date styles, in the newest leathers, fabrics and trimmings, in a wide range of sizes and widths. In Boston women can obtain Arch Preserver Shoes only at my two stores.

MARION DAVIES' NEW GOWNS WIN APPROVAL OF FASHIONABLES IN HOLLYWOOD

Cotton Stars in Style Show at Milton

By Margaret Matson

QUEEN COTTON ON PARADE! That was the title given the style show which was one of the features of the Garden Fete in Milton Monday afternoon. Some of you may have read an account of it in the social columns. It was for the benefit of the Denison House Vacation Fund and was held at the residence of Mrs. Wally H. Brown. Over forty of the 1933 debutantes served as models and it was our privilege to assist in conducting the style show.

Bathing Togs

The show began with a number of bathing togs in the newest of all beach favorites—unbleached muslin. Bathing suits were chief topic that allow an even sunken, beach pajamas with a beach coat that could be worn alone over one's bathing suit; above with a matching coat that just covered them, and a matching beach hat as well. Perfectly good dressing outfit with trousers lightened in at the ankles and topped with a long smock. The smock had a shirring that showed the neck. And all of these were of unbleached muslin in the usual colors—white, blue, and tan. A standing number was a pale blue, unbleached muslin, with a kerchief top. This is one of the very latest fashions.

After the beach clothes came a number of tennis frocks and suits which were perfectly correct for the street. One of the latter was a dark brown plaid suit worn under a fingerless jacket of loosely woven plaid cotton. Another was a brown linen suit with a plain gingham blouse and coat lapels. Others were combinations of black and white linen which were particularly effective.

Evening Clothes

And then came the late afternoon and evening clothes—some of the most beautiful that have ever been. Organza, mousseline de soie, crepe—barred, dimpled, plaided, checked, and striped—all the fabrics which we used to associate with children's models. The rain kept on appearing on the runway and the cotton rain, very close to the skin, with a little tulle at the neck and with an off-the-shoulder encircling the figure.

Another was a gray organza very new—and a deep raspberry red linen dinner gown, cut low in the back with a sailor collar and a most amazing matching belt that sported a long, standing quill.

Girl Needs Her Liberty, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Though I'm only 17 I work for my living and live at home with my mother and stepfather. Mother says he's old-fashioned, and right before my girl and boy friends he will tell me to go to bed before ten o'clock. If I go out I must be home at ten. Last summer I met a boy and liked him better than all the rest, but he had to go back to school, where he's a senior. But he doesn't write regularly, but he doesn't any more, and I hear he has a girl in his own home town. I don't know whether to write to him or not. I'm very miserable about all these things. Yours, JEAN.

Dear Jean: Your mother, being out of the spot and thinking your stepfather is too old-fashioned about your bed time, should take him in hand. And I agree with you that a girl who earns her own living should have a little more liberty. It might all right for you to send the boy you like an smiling letter, even though he has let one of yours go unanswered, thus if there is no response you would not of course continue to write.

As a matter of fact, the problem of marriage is just the problem of knowing how to live with another HUMAN BEING, and there is no "special course" which can prepare you for it. All you need is a knowledge of human psychology.

Perhaps the marriage service should be changed to read simply, "I, the undersigned, do promise to be absolutely on the level with my (her) and to be REASONABLE in all things. Just a square proposition. The rest is all humbug."

Now, in that they are not extravagant, and that they are not really or ever remember them!

But don't let them scare you! Marriage is NOT the great deal of an ideal—just a "square deal."

Yours truly, MRS. BECKMAN

My fiancé and I are invited out of town for a week-end. Upon returning home should he write and thank our hostess, who is really my friend, not his, or would my writing for the both of us be sufficient?

You should write the letter of thanks to the hostess, and your fiancé should write his letter of thanks to her. It would be quite out of order for you to make your letter include his thanks.

BLACK AND WHITE IS EVENING CHOICE

Glossy black monkey fur on white matelassé is one of the effective combinations selected by Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan Productions. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, whose latest picture was "Peg o' My Heart."

Miss Davies has chosen also an exquisitely simple black velvet gown with luxurious white bordering the brief capelet. The gown is long and slim, with a bit of a train to give it added dignity. All white with a touch of black or all black with a trim of white are destined to be leading combinations in all fashions. This dress is a charming example.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND Ravishing for Mumps Often

Problem of Married Life Afternoon Most Serious Parties Disease

By HELEN ROWLAND

ALL THE BOOKSHOPS have suddenly broken out into a violent rash of volumes on marriage. How to bear it, how to face it, how to get through it, how to make the best of it.

You'd fancy, from all these books, that marriage was a warning, that marriage was the electric chair—or at the least, the electric chair of England.

New Dessert Is a Friend in Emergency

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

IT WAS JUST 11:15 by the kitchen clock Saturday night when we remembered that we'd forgotten to order the cantaloupe that was to serve, filled with crushed strawberries, for Sunday dessert. And all the stores closed, and mine scheduled to gather round the 8 o'clock board!

Just as I started to mentally go over my dessert repertoire I happened to see standing on the pantry shelf two boxes of a new ready-mixed ice cream powder that had been given me to try some rainy Tuesday.

We don't ordinarily intend to use our friends for laboratory work, but I suddenly knew the law and I fell on the new product with avidity and a large appetite.

Seemed Simple

The directions said "add one cup milk slowly, stirring until smooth, and then beat in one jar of cream which has been whipped to stiff peaks. No eggs, no gelatin, no beating during the freezing process."

I really was pretty skeptical as to what kind of a finished product my ice cream would be. One package makes a big trayful and the package served nine persons, with some to spare.

The directions specially specified freezing slowly, so too fast I tried to freeze it in the refrigerator. We had the crushed strawberries that I had intended to use for the cantaloupe cups and served this as a sauce for the ice cream.

Hurry-up Cakes

With this went some of those hurry-up cakes that I told you about last week in this column. They are really for the rest of my natural life, and I am sure that I can make them in seven days.

And I wonder if you wouldn't like to know how Nancy makes them? Well, she makes them in three-quarters of an hour. She makes them in three-quarters of an hour. She makes them in three-quarters of an hour.

THE DAILY TRUE STORY

Three for Dinner

THEY WERE inseparable companions. One of those David and Jonathan friendships that develop in early college days and last a lifetime.

John Mansley and Robert Merrick had similar temperaments, similar dispositions, similar habits of thought—and were on an equal financial footing.

The boast of their friendship was that it was the type that made no demands, asked for no sacrifices unless it was given without asking.

"That's the difference," John often remarked in retrospect, "between a man's friendship and a woman's love. The latter is constantly demanding proof—until it gets tiresome."

It was just as something of a shock to John when Robert barged into his office one afternoon and the winsome womanly was hanging on to his arm.

He had seen her at an occasional dance, but had never been very much impressed.

John was surprised, but swallowed his discomfort. He examined her keenly. A comely girl and, for that matter, rather intelligent looking.

"Alice," he remarked Robert, "John is my oldest friend. If he had not been of the opposite gender you probably would have had a chance. He's one of those who always understood me perfectly."

BEST FRIEND "I'll try," he remarked, "to be the kind of wife who does not understand her husband."

John explained the remark and assured that the marriage would interfere with their camaraderie. But events began to shape themselves almost inevitably. And Robert was too deeply in love to realize this.

The first step was Robert's, moving to the suburb John and Robert had lived near each other in midtown apartment houses. But Alice did not wish to fly by rights (or as she called it the fly-by-night) of such vagabond existence. She had had a husband with a garden full of flowers, a swimming pool, a car, and a dog. And so Robert and Alice moved to the suburbs.

John had another habit of the devoted wife. She was like the old-fashioned woman where that Robert went away. She went along with him. This it came about that John could hold no more heart-to-heart talks with Robert than he could with John. Alice was Fundamental Principles of Beauty.

Relative to Household Ornamentation.

NOTE—Today we present first-aid to those who strive for the Home Beautiful—Hints from Hill's Manual of Ornamentation, 1921 (World's Fair Edition).

No portion of the interior of a house is there a better ornamentation than the lambrequin for door or window. If the housewife is desirous of ornamenting the window, she can do so by simply stretching a piece of wall paper across the top of the curtain.

A very pretty effect is had by capping a window with paper border, having a tissue fly (paper) suspended eight or ten inches beneath. In bedrooms paper lambrequins thus serve the purpose very well. In modern times, when glass has become so cheapened in price as to be within the reach of all, there is no longer necessity for withholding light from entering our rooms. If it is possible for the home owner to afford the expense, a clear transparent glass set in sashes that are raised with the aid of weights should be used. Especially is glass desirable for windows in the front portions of the house, near which the family frequently sit.

Conditions are steadily improving—with more and more people beginning to show confidence in something besides what they've learned.

And maybe the trouble with this age is that nobody's realistic except guys who write fiction.

Says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic de cuisine—
"The big fellows used to look upon public ownership as a threat. Now they regard it as a promise."
